Okay, Louisiana is extremely flawed Friends, communities, families and I have all been impacted by major gaps in environmental educational and governmental quality in Louisiana. I have such a great love and admiration for my communities and I really would love to stay to improve and build better systems for us. However, I am not going to be another generation to invest time and labor into a sinking hole. We put too much power in the word resilience as if living in a constant state of crisis makes us extra special for barely surviving it. If our systems weren't so flawed maybe I would not have had to rely on my community for help. Just because I am resilient does not mean I have to tolerate it

This is Leaving Louisiana,

Thank you,

- ella